Commissioning 3.0: The future of Commissioning

The current digitalization revolution is transforming major projects from feasibility studies, through design and construction, to start-up and operations. All parts of the project and asset lifecycle are increasingly being influenced by digital intelligence to increase predictability and decrease costs.

How are we responding as commissioning and startup professionals?

CPS22 will examine, debate, and share the latest thinking, trends, and challenges connected with the current digital revolution and provide an insight into the future of commissioning

Papers and presentations

If you would like to present your knowledge, experience and lessons learned with your digital journey and are available November 10th, 2022, at the University of Houston campus, please email a brief overview to:
